

1. Aerial view of Beach Boulevard in Jacksonville, FL

"Looking east (toward the Atlantic Ocean) above the intersection of Beach Blvd. with Huffman Blvd."

Source: State Archives of Florida/Fisher

2. Aerial view of St. Nicholas

Source: Jacksonville Historical Society Archives

3. Emmanuel P.E. Church, St. Nicholas on Highland Ave., Atlantic Blvd. 1937

Source: Jacksonville Historical Society Archives

4. Cabin on Pottsborg Creek

Source: Jacksonville Historical Society Archives

5. Old Pottsborg Creek

Source: Jacksonville Historical Society Archives

6. University and Hart Bridge Expressway

Source: Jacksonville Historical Society Archives

7. Building No. 17 under construction at the Merrill-Stevens shipyard in Jacksonville, FL

Dec. 31, 1917. Bruce, Fred W. (Frederick William), b. 1856.

"From a write-up on Fort Saint Nicholas by Arlington resident, F. W. Bruce ca. 1924: 'In 1917, the Merrill Stevens company began construction of what was designated the 'South Side Shipyard.' which was afterwards absorbed by the U. S. Shipping Board. For the construction of the plant, the writer was appointed Chief, and occupied that position until after construction of ships for WW I began.' Merrill Stevens Shipbuilding bought an 80 acre site, which was the old Hudhall farm and, with F. W. Bruce as supervisor, built boat slips, marine rails, dry-docks, a water tower made of concrete, a huge pattern loft, and a total of nine buildings including, a generator building, pattern building, and offices".

Source: State Archives of Florida/Bruce

8. Fort San Nicholas Marker | Jacksonville, FL

"This was a Spanish Colonial fort established in 1740 by Governor Manuel de Montiano, in present day Jacksonville, Duval County, Florida. It was abandoned in 1817. The marker reads: "North of this stood early Spanish fortification - Fort San Nicholas. Abandoned July 4, 1817."

Source: https://digitalcommons.unf.edu/historical\_architecture\_main/3168/ Fort San Nicholas Marker, Jacksonville

9. 1912: Car crossing bridge on Atlantic Boulevard

Source: Jacksonville Historical Society Archives/Leah Mary Cox Collection

10. Memorial Hospital

Source: Jacksonville Historical Society Archives

11. Arlington Bottle Gas Company building | Jacksonville, FL
1960

Source: State Archives of Florida/Fisher